GENERAL DENTISTRY

Drs. Brent Fleming, James Guirguis, and Michael Guirguis strive to establish a positive, long-term relationship with each patient while maintaining a relaxed office ambience. Their unbiased, informative approach ensures that patients know their options for restoring and enhancing their smile. Listening to each patient's concerns is emphasized so treatment can be tailored accordingly. "No patient is just a chart, a set of teeth, or the next patient to us," Dr. Michael Guirguis says. "The more involved patients are in making their dental health decisions, the less room there is for fear and uncertainty."

The premier level of care that Drs. Brent Fleming, James Guirguis, and Michael Guirguis provide is accentuated by their continuing education and professional dental association participation. They attend numerous postgraduate education courses on restorative and cosmetic dentistry, complex implant rehabilitation, and wellness in dentistry. Integrating systemic wellness into their practice has broadened the possibilities for comprehensive care. When taking in new patients, they focus on thorough exams, checking the overall health of the teeth and gums, performing oral cancer exams, taking X-rays when necessary, and addressing all dental concerns and smile goals. The team at Richardson Dentistry promotes an all-body approach to dental health, recognizing that the health of the mouth reflects overall health. Addressing the root causes of oral diseases and developing individualized care is what sets them apart.
